What is Co-Sponsorship?

Co-sponsorship is a model of resettlement where a community group partners with a local resettlement agency to provide specific services and financial support to a newly arrived refugee family. This type of volunteer commitment is incredibly important to the work of welcome. Co-sponsors bring an essential level of commitment, continuity, and care for the refugees they serve and significantly multiply and extend the services refugees receive. Co-sponsors are overseen by one of our local resettlement agencies who provide each co-sponsor team with in-depth training prior to working with a family and continued support throughout their service period.

Co-Sponsorship Requirements

Across the LIRS network specific requirements for co-sponsor programs vary by local resettlement site, but in general co-sponsors are expected to do the following:

Form a Team and Select a Team Leader
Co-sponsor teams can vary in size and there is no universal requirement for team sizes. In our network teams tend to range from 6-10 core members who work directly with clients.

Commit to a Specific Time Frame of Service
Program lengths can vary from 3-12 months across the LIRS network.

Raise and Donate Financial Support
Co-sponsors are expected to raise a specific amount of money to which will be used to supplement essential needs of the family such as rent, healthcare, transportation, or groceries. LIRS local resettlement sites have set their own financial requirement for co-sponsor teams based on the cost of living in their area and needs of their clients.

Sign a Commitment Form with Your Local Resettlement Agency
Commitment forms are non-legally binding agreements between a co-sponsor team and a local resettlement agency. The commitment form outlines expectations of co-sponsors and duties they agree to perform.
Devote Time Each Week to Assist the Family
The local resettlement agency will give co-sponsorship teams guidance on how much time they should expect to spend with the family. Co-sponsors can expect to be spending more time with the family in their first month after arrival as they learn to navigate their new community than later months.

Receive a Background Check
It is a standard best practice across the refugee resettlement field that all volunteers who work directly with refugees receive a background check. This is a way of safeguarding the clients we serve. Before anyone can volunteer to co-sponsor a resettled family, the agency will require a background check through their organization.

Complete an Orientation and Training
Co-sponsorship teams must attend a co-sponsorship training put on by the local resettlement agency where they will learn about the expectations and guidelines of the local agency’s co-sponsorship program.

Follow Guidelines from Local Agency Staff
Local resettlement offices will provide co-sponsors with information about their program’s expectations, avenues of communication, onboarding process, and guidelines.

Services Co-Sponsors Provide
Each one of the local refugee resettlement agencies in the LIRS network are required by our government partners to provide specific services called core services to each refugee they resettle. Co-sponsors help to provide certain core services in addition to other support services that aid in refugees’ integration into their new communities. Local offices determine which core and support services they want co-sponsors to provide and have them outlined in their commitment form that co-sponsors sign.
